Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

Madison House is a 2½ story stone dormitory building in Beaux-Arts neoclassical style located on the west side of the quadrangle of the former Tome School for Boys on the grounds of the Bainbridge Naval Training Center near Port Deposit, Maryland. It is now in use as part of the Susquehanna Job Corps Center.

The rectangular building has a central portion of three bays flanked by five bays on each side. The central portion has a limestone tetrastyle Ionic portico with a plaster pediment and garlanded oculus. The doorway has a limestone arched surround and a fanlight over the double entrance doors. The fenestration is six over six light sliding sash. The lintels, sills, and quoins are limestone.

Several original features of the building have been removed. Wood balconies on scroll-sawn consoles were located on the second floor inner three bays. One-story open porches with turned wood roof balustrades originally located on the north and south elevations have been removed and replaced by steel fire escapes. The three bay gable ends have been altered for access doors to the fire escapes. The original window shutters have been removed.

Interior alterations during the Navy's use of Madison House have left little of the original woodwork and trim intact. The main lobby or "clubroom" has been reduced in size and the fireplace is closed off.
